I. Cable TV Service: Getting Started

Cable TV Service is available in your room. All you have to do is connect your Television to the Cable TV Converter box.

What is a Converter Box?
Today’s televisions are designed to let you receive a wide array of cable TV channels, but they can’t descramble the signals sent by digital cable networks, premium channels, or Pay-Per-View. Your converter box serves as the descrambler and/or channel selector, making TV sets cable-ready. They enable TVs to recognize cable input and expand channel capacity. Converter boxes allow cable subscribers to view services such as movie channels or Pay-Per-View.

Your room is equipped with a DCT-700 Digital Cable TV Converter Box (see below). This converter is your gateway to view the channels delivered to your room and to experience Dolby ® sound.

A: lights when power is on.
B: light will display when RCN is sending a message to you via your Cable Box.
C: Audio Output.
D: Video Output.
E: RF in.
F: Out to TV / VCR.
G: Power Connection
How do I connect my TV to the Cable Converter Box?

Standard TV Cabling

Use 75-ohm coaxial cables to connect your DCT-700 to your TV.

Standard VCR Cabling

Use 75-ohm coaxial cables to connect your DCT-700 to your VCR.
Composite Baseband Cabling
Connect your DCT-700 to your TV using your RCA-type baseband outputs to experience stereo and Dolby® Sound when available.

Composite VCR Cabling
Connect your DCT-700 to your VCR using the audio connectors on the VCR.
Stereo Cabling (VCR to Stereo)
Connect your DCT-700 to your Stereo using the audio connectors on the VCR.
