Historical/Biographical Note

The late U.S. Representative John Joseph "Joe" Moakley (D-MA) represented Massachusetts' Ninth Congressional District for fourteen consecutive terms (1973-2001). Over the course of his fifty-year career in public service Moakley, a self-described "bread-and-butter" politician, devoted himself to the bedrock concerns of his constituents: education, jobs, housing, health care, veterans' benefits, and the prosperity of his city, his state, and his region.

Born on April 27, 1927, his childhood years were spent in South Boston, a tight-knit, blue collar neighborhood of Boston during the Great Depression. At the age of 15, he altered his birth certificate to enlist in the U.S. Navy and served as a Seabee in the Pacific theater during World War II. After the war he took advantage of the GI Bill to attend Newman Prep and the University of Miami.
His political career started in the early 1950s when he ran for a seat in the Massachusetts House of Representatives. He was elected to the legislature on his second attempt in 1952. While serving as a state representative, Moakley enrolled in Suffolk Law School, spending his days in the State House and his nights in class. He earned his law degree in 1956 and later received an Honorary Doctorate of Public Administration in 1977 from Suffolk University. It was during this period that he met his future wife, Evelyn Duffy of Cambridge, MA, whom he married in 1957. When Moakley lost a bid move up to the Massachusetts Senate he spent several years in private legal practice. He later ran successfully, serving in the Senate from 1965 until 1970. Some of the major themes of his career began to emerge during these years, such as his support for affordable housing, historic preservation, and a commitment to the environment.

In 1970, Moakley ran for the open U.S. congressional seat being vacated by longtime Speaker of the House John McCormack of South Boston. In a crowded field, Moakley lost in the Democratic primary to Louise Day Hicks, who was nationally known for her opposition to court-ordered busing. Undeterred, Moakley jumped into the race for city councilor, won with the highest vote total in the city's history, and waited for his next opportunity.

In 1972, Moakley again ran for the congressional seat, outmaneuvering the incumbent by running as an independent. Hicks faced a bruising primary against multiple opponents before Moakley easily defeated her in the general election.

Once in Washington, Moakley returned to the Democratic fold and Speaker of the House Thomas "Tip" O'Neill took the rookie congressman under his wing. With O'Neill's support and his own political sense, Moakley gained stature and influence on the House Personnel Committee and the House Committee on Rules. The Rules Committee, sometimes described as the "traffic cop" of Congress, controls how and when legislation reaches the House floor for debate. In 1989, he was appointed chair of the Rules Committee.

Moakley often came to an issue through a local event or constituent need and was inspired to address it on a national or international level. He often held open office hours in towns in his district, meeting constituents, answering questions, hearing their complaints and requests for help.

In 1983, at a post office in Jamaica Plain, Moakley heard from Salvadoran refugees who feared being deported. El Salvador was mired in a bloody civil war, and death squads were murdering or "disappearing" tens of thousands of civilians. The refugees feared that they would be harmed by the Salvadoran government and its allies if they returned.

For six years, he fought to pass legislation that would allow Salvadoran immigrants to live and work in the United States until it was safe to return to their country. Finally, he used leverage as the new chair of the Rules Committee to amend the Immigration Act of 1990 to grant Temporary Protected Status to Salvadorians who had fled their country. The bill passed, implementing measures that have saved hundreds of thousands of lives from potential harm and which are still in use today.

Moakley may be best remembered for his courageous leadership of the investigation into the murders of six Jesuit priests, their housekeeper and her daughter at the University of Central America in San Salvador in 1989. Speaker of the House Tom Foley launched a congressional investigation into the murders and appointed Moakley to lead it. Congress had authorized billions of dollars in economic and military aid over the years to El Salvador, and, with the Salvadoran military and the leftist guerilla group Farabundo Marta- National Liberation Front (FMLN) accusing one another of the atrocity, U.S. legislators demanded answers. The Moakley Commission, also known as the Speaker's Task Force on El Salvador, was able to prove that the murders had been carried out by the Salvadoran military. The Commission's final report hinted that culpability could extend to the highest levels of the government of El Salvador. The Moakley Commission findings were used as trial evidence in the first-ever convictions of Salvadoran military personnel for human rights crimes.

Additionally, Congress used the commission's findings to cut military aid to El Salvador, forcing the government to negotiate with the FMLN to end the war. Moakley then became a significant figure in the peace talks, most notably through a historic visit behind the lines to meet with FMLN leaders. His willingness to recognize the guerrillas was a breakthrough moment on the road to peace: the FMLN finally believed that the U.S. would back an agreement—and in January of 1992, both sides signed accords that ended the violence.

Other signature issues in Moakley's career included the fight for a fire-safe cigarette, accurate labeling on food products and advertising, and lifting the U.S. embargo on Cuba.

In 1979, five children and their parents died in a tragic house fire sparked by a smoldering cigarette in Westwood, Massachusetts. In an effort to prevent similar tragedies, the congressman began a twenty-year fight for federal legislation requiring the tobacco industry to develop a self-extinguishing cigarette. He obtained passage of two bills that laid the foundation for a federal law. The Cigarette Safety Act of 1984 established Congressional committees to determine if a fire-safe cigarette was technically feasible. Then the Fire-Safe Cigarette Act of 1990 required the government to develop a test to assess how "fire-safe" a cigarette was. As of 2008, there was still no federal law mandating the manufacture of fire-safe cigarettes, but sixteen states, including Massachusetts, have regulations in place. Massachusetts Congressman Edward Markey has continued the fight, submitting to the House in 2002 and 2004 a fire-safe cigarette bill called the Moakley Memorial Act.

Moakley was a major supporter of the Nutrition Labeling and Education Act of 1990, which called for clear and concise information and prohibited misleading nutrition and health claims on food labels. He also introduced legislation to extend these requirements to food advertising.

In the 1990s Moakley became involved in the Cuban embargo issue. He promoted an open policy, including expanded trade between the U.S. and Cuba, to lessen the suffering for the Cuban people. The Congressman introduced bills in Congress to lift the embargo on food, medicine, and medical supplies, but despite mustering considerable bipartisan support, he was unable to win their passage. Nonetheless, he attempted to keep the spotlight on the plight of the Cuban people through his trips in 1996, 1998, and 2000.

Moakley's belief that ensuring the economic prosperity of Massachusetts and New England was a major responsibility for elected officials is evident in the many public projects that he championed on behalf of Boston, the state of Massachusetts and New England. In the Boston area, he promoted and helped secure funding for the following projects: revitalizing the South Boston Waterfront, public transportation improvements such as the "Big Dig" and the Silver Line, and the Boston Harbor clean-up. Additionally, Moakley was able to obtain federal recognition and funds critical to protecting and restoring important locales, such as: the Boston African American National Historic Site, Boston Harbor Islands National Recreation Area, Charlestown Navy Yard and the USS Constitution, Dorchester Heights, Faneuil Hall, the Old South Meeting House, and the Old State House. Outside of Boston, he embraced the concerns and agendas of his entire district including the relocation of GTE to the Miles Standish Industrial Park in Taunton, Ma, helping the town of Walpole fight off a sludge landfill, and the establishment of a technology center at Bridgewater State College.

In the 1990s the congressman championed the core issues of his career while enduring personal battles that included a liver transplant, the death of his beloved wife, Evelyn, and, finally, incurable leukemia. Despite these challenges, he continued to ably and energetically represent his district until his death on May 28, 2001.

Sub-Series Description for MS100/02.02: Legislative Correspondence, 1974-2001, n.d.

Volume: 23.2 cu.ft. 58 boxes, Location: 08, Arrangement: Alphabetically by correspondence code for each session of Congress.

Scope: This large sub-series contains correspondence, mainly from constituents, regarding legislative issues of the day and responses sent by Moakley's office. The files are arranged chronologically by session of Congress and then alphabetically by the correspondence code assigned by staffers. The two-digit subject codes relate to committee or topic covered and reflects the filing structure of the Constituent Mail System (CMS). Topics include: appropriations, economy, education, defense, agriculture and the environment. For a number of years Moakley's staff also maintained Legislative Correspondence Logs in binders (104th-107th Congresses). A majority of the materials are from 1994-2001 because correspondence pre-dating 1994 was sometimes interfiled in the legislative assistant files and a portion of files from the 1980s and 1990s were destroyed due to a storage facility problem at the Capitol. Associated Materials: See Series 3: Legislative Assistant Files for related materials from the 1970s-1994.

Series Description for MS100/03: Legislative Assistants’ Files, 1968-2001

Volume: 62.2 cu.ft. 123 boxes, Location: R08-R09, Arrangement: Divided into 9 sub-series: 3.1: Carlton Currens, 3.2 Jack Dooling, 3.3 Ellen Harrington, 3.4 James McGovern, 3.5: Sophie (Wattles) Hayford, 3.6: Steve LaRose, 3.7 Kathleen Texeira, 3.8: Kelly Timilty, 3.9 General files (No staffer assigned)

Scope: The records in this large series represent files created by Moakley's legislative directors, assistants and aides as they drafted bills, advised Moakley on possible legislative strategies, researched pending legislation, represented him at meetings and kept him abreast of current issues. Moakley's Rules Committees files were not transferred to the Archives, instead they are official records retained by the National Archives. The types of materials include correspondence, memoranda, draft legislation, statements and speeches and secondary material collected for reference. Topics covered in this portion of the collection include foreign policy, defense spending, government affairs, the environment, energy, aging, trade, transportation, and education. The legislative files have been divided into sub-series by the name of the staff member who created them, with the exception that legislative directors' materials were often interfiled in other staffers' papers. Additionally, some of the staffers generally acquired the files of those who had previously covered those subjects and they remain interfiled with their papers. Because each staffer managed their own files the arrangement varies according to the staffers' method of organization.

Sub-Series Description for MS100/03.03: Ellen Harrington, 1963-2001

Volume: 19.7 cu.ft. 38 boxes, Location: R08, Arrangement: Alphabetically by topic and then chronologically within topic. Oversized materials, bound copies of technical reports and a sample carton of R.J. Reynolds' Premier cigarettes are located in Box 38.

Scope: Ellen Harrington served on Moakley's staff from 1987-2001, first as legislative assistant and later as legislative director. Harrington worked on issues related to the environment, health, taxation and appropriations. The largest subset of Ellen Harrington's materials relate to Congressman Moakley's campaign for fire-safe cigarettes which began in 1979 when a members of a family of seven in Westwood, Massachusetts was killed in a cigarette-caused fire. For over twenty years, Moakley's office introduced legislation to mandate the manufacture of self-extinguishing cigarettes and fire prevention initiatives. The records represent the working files of three legislative assistants: Ellen Harrington (1987-2001), Carlton Currens (1981-1987) and Albie Jarvis (1979-1981). The files contain draft legislation; hearing testimony; memos between Moakley and his staff; correspondence with colleagues, the Consumer Protection Safety Commission (CPSC), federal agencies, task forces, industry lobbyists and Massachusetts constituents; floor statements; copies of bills; press releases; technical reports; journal articles and news clippings. Additionally, her files provide insight into Moakley's efforts to preserve and protect Boston Harbor and the Boston Harbor Islands starting in the 1960s as a state senator. Early documents from Moakley's career in the Massachusetts legislature illustrate his efforts to halt a plan to use the Boston Harbor Islands as a site for the 1976 World's Fair and his promotion of legislation that transferred ownership of the islands to the state of Massachusetts. This early action set the stage for his work in the 1990s when Congressman Moakley secured federal funds for the Harbor Clean-up and for the 1996 designation of the Boston Harbor Islands National Park. The files also document Moakley's involvement in district projects including securing funding for federal assistance programs such as LIHEAP, opposing the establishment of a sludge landfill in the town of Walpole, the Muddy River Restoration, and the stewardship of the Taunton River.

Note: A selection of items have been digitized within this sub-series, please consult Archives for access.

Sub-Series Description for MS100/03.04: James P. McGovern, 1936-2001

Volume: 18.5 cu.ft. 37 boxes, Location: R08, Arrangement: The files are divided into 4 categories: El Salvador Legislation (Boxes 1-13), Speaker's Task Force on El Salvador (Boxes 14-22), FBI Declassified Files (Boxes 22-35) and General Legislative Files (Boxes 36-37). The majority focus on different aspects of Moakley's work in El Salvador. Alphabetical and chronological Scope: James (Jim) McGovern joined Moakley's staff in 1982 and served as Moakley's press secretary, legislative aide and close advisor until his election to U.S. Congress in 1997. Covering the years of 1981-2001, the legislative files document bills introduced by Moakley related to El Salvador including immigration/asylum issues; human rights; U.S. policy in El Salvador, attempts to reduce U.S. military aid to El Salvador; the 1992 Peace Accords; attempts to close the School of the Americas (SOA) and relief efforts for El Salvador after a series of natural disasters in the late 1990s. Also included are Steve LaRose's files who took over this issue area in the mid-1990s when McGovern was elected to Congress. The Speaker's Task Force on El Salvador files document the congressional investigation of the murder of six Jesuit priests and two lay women at the University of El Salvador (UCA) on November 16, 1989. On December 5, 1989, House Speaker Thomas S. Foley formed a special congressional task force to monitor the Salvadoran government's investigation of the murders and appointed Moakley as the chairman. The Task Force, also referred to as the Moakley Commission, was comprised of Democratic committee chairmen and other members who were involved with Central American issues. Moakley led the investigation and traveled to El Salvador several times throughout the duration of the investigation. The investigation led to the successful prosecution of members of the Salvadoran military and helped pave the way for peace negotiations. These materials are arranged chronologically and include correspondence, trip materials, briefing memos, background files, news clippings and articles, reports from NGOS, photographs and other materials Moakley's office collected throughout the investigation. The FBI Declassified Documents include intelligence records related to human rights cases in El Salvador during the 1980s and 1990s. Moakley obtained the records in 1994 and 1995 through a Freedom of Information Act (FOIA) request Although portions of the files are redacted, the materials provide access to the Federal Bureau of Investigation's files on high-profile human rights cases such as Archbishop Romero's assassination in 1980, the murders of four churchwomen in 1980, the Peterzell/AIFLD case, activities of the Salvadoran Death squads, the Jesuit murders of 1989 and the Pickett/Dawson murders of 1991. The types of documents include: letters, memorandum, lab reports, polygraphs reports, internal FBI communication documents, photographs and background materials from external sources. The files are arranged by the file names and documents numbers as given by the FBI. Also of interest are letters from the U.S. Attorney Generals explaining the release of the materials and the circumstances for withholding and redacting information within the documents. The General Legislative Files contain information about a variety of issues including the arms race of the 1980s and a variety of foreign policy concerns. The files are arranged alphabetically.

Associated Materials: Materials related to El Salvador located in Sub-series 3.6 and an oral history interview of McGovern (OH-0013).

Notes: Some confidential materials have been removed and are closed to research; consult Archives staff for more information. A selection of items have been digitized within this sub-series, consult Archives for access.

Sub-Series Description for MS100/03.06: Steve LaRose, 1992-2001

Volume: 8.5 cu.ft. 17 boxes, Location: R09, Arrangement: Alphabetical by issue

Scope: Steve LaRose served as a member of Moakley's legislative staff from 1994-2001. His issue areas included appropriations, banking, business, defense, foreign policy, and human rights. The majority of his files, however, focus on Moakley's foreign policy work with Cuba and El Salvador, namely foreign policy trips to El Salvador and Cuba, efforts to close the School of the Americas and international trade relations. A selection of items from this sub-series have been digitized, consult Archives for access.

Associated Materials: Materials related to El Salvador located in Sub-series 3.4 and an oral history interview of LaRose (OH-0002).

Series Description for MS100/06: Constituent Services, 1973-2001

Volume: 16 cu.ft. 42 boxes, Location: R09, Arrangement: Divided into six sub-series: 6.1: Aid and Assistance Files, 6.2: Casework, 6.3: Constituent Index Cards, 6.4: Constituent Services Logs, 6.5 Grants, 6.6: Information Requests

Scope: This series documents the constituent services handled by Moakley and his staff on behalf of the citizens of the Ninth Congressional District. Moakley regarded constituent service as one his most important functions and would often personally handle requests. The district offices handled the majority of these requests, with complex casework and aid and assistance requests handled by District Directors Roger Kineavy (1973-1994) and Fred Clark (1995-2001). Requests were fielded via phone, letter or through informal constituent sessions held at Castle Island, district offices, post offices or for a time via his mobile congressional office. Typical transactions included information requests, responding to inquiries regarding legislative issues, assisting groups in Massachusetts to secure federal grants, and helping individuals with difficulties involving the Federal government (casework). The collection also includes documents related to Moakley's work on behalf of the citizens of Massachusetts and in particular the Ninth Congressional District that he represented. The District Issues series documents Moakley's promotion of major public works projects such as the Big Dig, Boston Harbor Clean-up effort, creation of the Boston Harbor Islands National Park and historic preservation. Services provided by Moakley's office are represented in the Constituent Services Files and include files on records document the representative function of Moakley's office. District and D.C. staff managed casework, coordinating service academy appointments.

Series Description for MS100/07: Public Relations, 1972-2001

Volume: 33.7 cu.ft. 36 boxes, Location: R09, Arrangement: Records in this series are divided into three subseries: 7.1: News Clippings, 7.2: Newsletters and Mailings, and 7.3: Press Releases.

Sub-Series Description for MS100/07.01: News Clippings, 1972-2001
Volume: 28.8 cu.ft. 24 boxes, Location: Off-site Storage
Arrangement: Arranged chronologically by month, although some subject files and publication name files were used 1972-1975. Starting in November 1974 the clipping system changed; clippings are organized within each year with first with Binders, then Subjects, then Months.

Scope: This sub-series is a compilation of newspaper clippings from local and national publications that mention Congressman Moakley, Massachusetts politics, or an issue related to the Ninth District. Most of the clippings were collected by a news clipping service and sent to Moakley's district offices. The majority of the clippings files are arranged chronologically by month with the exception of some files identified by subject or publication. At times, Moakley’s Taunton Office organized clippings in binders by subject and dates. A selection of items within this sub-series have been digitized, consult Archives for access.

Notes: These records are stored offsite; 24 hours notice is required to retrieve them for use.
