

Web Sites Reviewing Other Web Sites

The process to identify appropriate subject- and topic-oriented World Wide Web sites to use for research can be improved by consulting evaluative and reviewing sources about Web sites on the Internet. Academic subject web directories, such as The Internet Public Library and others, use subject specialists to review content prior to providing a link to the web site.