What do you think are three weaknesses that need to be improved in your degree program?

Department	Count
Accounting
A little costly	1
Accounting skill course not enough	1
Advising	1
Class availability	1
Class format is a little bit boring.	1
Class participation	1
Classes only offered one semester	1
Classes that run through 10pm.	1
Classes, while providing a good foundation of accounting knowledge, do not include ANY of the actual work done at an accounting firm- there should be a class that simulates the work environment by putting together work papers, preparing an audit or tax return, etc. so that students entering the work environment understand the actual process of working as well as having the raw accounting knowledge to do the work	1
Computer Skills	1
Constant group work- there should be more of a mix of individual and group work allowing more scheduling flexibility	1
Cost	1
Course quality	1
Course selection	1
Course which allows you to work on gift, estate and income tax returns	1
Courses not technical enough	1
Direction as to how the program works	1
Faculty	1
Few classmate interaction	1
Financial aid availability	1
Flexibility	1
Grammar	1
Have homework be graded to encourage it being done (provide more of an incentive) and submitted through blackboard (for automatic/easy of grading for faculty)	1
Helping place their students in accounting positions after graduation	1
Job fair scale	1
Lack of activities after class	1
Lack of electives offered that I already haven't taken	1
Lack of immediate course that combine easy and difficult ones	1
Lack of Job\Internship connection with firms	1

Lack of real work/intern experience	1
Language	1
Learned little from some required classes	1
Limited amount of stuff learned	1
Limited course offered	1
Little attention to details	1
Little electives	1
Make up on Friday	1
More courses should be set to solve accounting problems	1
More electives	1
More practical things	1
More Research	1
More Writing Classes	1
Mostly International	1
N/A	3
N/A - Completely Satisfied	3
Name recognition	1
Need to take classes in order	1
Network	1
Networking is weak	1
Night classes	2
No internship	1
No morning classes	1
Not enough career guide at the beginning	1
Not enough support for student job searching	1
Not focus on CPA	1
Not much electives	1
Not very practical	1
Opportunity	1
Opportunity to internship	1
Practical knowledge	1
Professors do not seem to be interested in students	1
Professors too busy at times	1
Program scale	1
Public Speaking	1
Real world application	1
Realistic Expectations	1
Redundant	1
Should make acct803 a mandatory course	1
Should include more accounting classes instead of some course like acct861	1

Small program; not enough students (MST)	1
Some classes require excessive group works! These are not necessary!	1
Some course have too much paper	1
Some instructors hard to understand	1
Some not related to real world issues	1
Some professors are irresponsible, teaching for money only!	1
Some professors not very professional	1
Sometimes, too much focus on the CPA	1
Suggested Electives	1
Tax classes in the spring semester.	1
Teaching to the CPA	1
Textbooks	1
Too easy	3
Too little flexibility with due dates for people that travel	1
Too much group work, not enough individual work	1
Tuition	1
Way too many group projects for people that work	1
Weak alumni network	1
Weak career service	1
Workload	1
Writing skill	3
Communication and Journalism
Applicable Projects	1
Availability of courses in general, specifically electives	1
Class offerings- need to be more consistent	1
Cohort	1
Concise writing	1
Consistency of course offerings	1
Courses offered	1
Difficulties	1
Facilities	1
Faculty	1
Instructor selection	1
Less variety	1
Level of difficulty of courses (felt more like an undergraduate program)	1
Liberties	1
Materials	1
More collaboration with professors	1
More creative assignments	1
More diverse courses	1

More electives	1
More interaction with faculty	1
More opportunity for internships	1
More Options for classes	1
N/A	1
Not a lot of elective options applicable within Sawyer Business School	1
Not being offered anymore!	1
Not enough English language support for international students	1
Not enough graduate program community - mix of full time and part time	1
Professionalism of program directors	1
Program eliminated	1
Public Speaking	1
Repetition with some undergrad courses	1
Social	1
Some courses I did not learn much new material	1
Some courses were far too easy for graduate level	1
Speaking	1
Students with lack of work experience	1
Technology	1
Times of classes	1
Variety of electives	1
Writing	1
Economics
A handful of professors (most of whom were denied tenure and left)	1
Administration's withdraw of support more generally	1
Classes that start at 7:30 p.m.	1
Faculty were cut in large numbers and not replaced	1
Few opportunities to interact with other students	1
Have more elective courses	1
Having classes with PhD students	1
PhD program was cancelled	1
Program Was Closed	1
Resources were cut	1
Shutting the program down was a mistake	1
Very late classes 7-10 p.m	1
Higher Education Studies	3
Course work more specific to job market	1
More opportunities to intern	1
Relevance to job market	1
Finance

A few professors were low quality	1
Electives available more often	1
Extra Curricular Activities	1
Guests Speaking	1
Internships	1
Lack of academic counseling	1
Lack of international exposure	1
Lack of introductory courses	1
Mentor program	1
More electives	1
More examples in class rather than concepts	1
More organized	1
More summer classes	1
Not easy to find a job	1
Not much analytics	1
Only night classes	1
Quality of relation with faculty	1
Real life examples in class	1
Some electives not satisfactory	1
Stressful in work	1
To many group projects	1
We need more communal engagement	1
Global MBA	20
Class sizes are sometimes a little larger than I would like	1
Core Requirements are repeated classes from undergrad program, did not learn too much new in the course, it was more of a refresher. I wish there were more electives and less core.	1
Dean involvement	1
Difficult	1
Global Internship	1
Lack of "Business writing" courses, particularly in marketing	1
Lack of choice in electives	1
Low quality of some adjunct professors	1
More flexibility. I am a GMBA and wish that I had more freedom in choosing my classes. Every class I took was predetermined and I had no say other than the travel abroad seminar location. If given the option, I would have loved to have taken 2 seminars or even done a semester abroad.	1
More Global Seminar	1
More International Classes	1
More Work experience for GMBAs	1
Networking/Employment Opportunities	1
No providing Internship opportunities	1

Professors- adjunct	1
Quantitative Skills Exposure	1
Repetitive content/overlap between courses	1
Some too crowded/ambitious curriculums -- especially noticeable in summer courses	1
Students who do not belong in an MBA program (anywhere)	1
There is no time for social activities	1
Government
3 hours classes need breaks	1
Available electives	1
Class length	1
Core courses are not diverse enough	1
Group projects	1
informative	1
It needs to be advertised more	1
Lack of diverse electives in federal, state, and local management	1
Lack of leadership courses	1
Limited areas of International relations	1
More classes	1
More classes should bring in guest speakers from the field	1
More electives	1
More internships under professor supervision	1
More professors in IR and Middle East track	1
More research projects to attract degree seekers	1
N/A	3
No connections with people	1
Not enough electives in GVT	1
Not much interaction between students of diverse backgrounds	1
Not much practical training	1
Not Practical	1
Old professors	1
Some classes that are electives should be required	1
TA opportunities	1
Theoretical work	1
Undergrads in class	1
Variety	1
MBA
Academic ability of some students admitted to program	1
Academic Advisors	2
Academic counseling should be directed towards honestly directing students in the right path.	1
Advisor was not active unless asked	1

All night classes	1
Alumni engagement	1
Attendance...why? (no need in grad school)	1
Behind technology - should teach digital media analytics	1
Being mixed with undergraduates for electives	1
Better access to faculty	1
Better selections for elective courses	1
Blackboard is not fully integrated in all courses	1
Blackboard technical issues	1
Business relationships	1
Career services	1
Certain Faculty Members	1
Class Hours	1
Class offering schedule - core and electives	1
Class size	1
Class time flexibility	1
Classes building out of date	1
Classrooms are outdated for cost of tuition	1
Communication	2
Communication between schools	1
Computer Lab	1
Consistency between professors for same classes (one professor teaches the same class radically different than another)	1
Could be better organized	1
Course time	1

My CAS counseling advisor was not helpful in working toward my progress between CAS and SBS. I proactively sat with him when I started the dual degree program. His lack of ability to advise me appropriately caused my progress in the counseling program to be delayed a year. Due to my current life outside of school, I had to withdraw from CAS because of this misunderstanding. I would think that it is in the best interest of Suffolk University to retain students who are in good standing and help them finish the degree(s) they were accepted to pursue.	1

- Appendix F -

Please provide any additional comments about your experience at Suffolk University.

- Although NESAD is a small school, there is a lack of connectedness between students, faculty and programs that should come with such an intimate environment. A handful of early/mid degree elective classes related to the program do not feel necessary for learning the required degree, and a large majority of the student body here feels that they required simply for the school to extend the degree time and max out class sizes in order for the school to profit. This is a pervasive attitude; I learned a lot about myself and the field during my time here, but I believe in order for the program to gain the standing it is aiming for, these should be taken into consideration for future students to thrive and succeed.
- As an older student returning to school to advance my career, Suffolk was excellent as was the MPA program truly strengthened my skills and increased my confidence. Overall very positive experience.
- Cancelling the PhD program in economics was a big mistake. The faculty is world class and the PhD students are fantastic. As an MA candidate, I was able to attend many seminars and presentations by the PhD students, which greatly enhanced my experience. Very sad that this won't be available for others in the future.
- Cant wait to walk across that stage I worked hard for 4 years part time while starting a family and having a baby I feel very proud to be completed.
- Compared to similar programs at different schools in the Boston area, the MHA program is the only program that offers classes from 4:30-7:10 & 7:15-10:00. This should be changed from possibly 5:30-8:10 or 6-9. Suffolk markets the program to "working adults", but what "working adult" doesn't work from 9-5? It makes getting to class stressful and kept me from getting a few new 9-5 jobs! Plus being in class until 10 when you have to be up early the second day to get to class is even worse. Either stop advertising your program as one for working adults or make it more flexible!
- Enjoyed my part time study over 2 years very much. Enjoyed learning from faculty members and a very diverse student base. Program gave me the confidence to fulfil my potential in my career in accounting.
- Even though some professors may be professional in their fields in the real world, they should enhance their teaching methods and classes formats. They should also use more real world cases or examples in class.
- Good university overall. Because we learn from students just as professors, I hope that student acceptance meets a high criteria on the profession side.
- Great.

- Great experience from the Dakar Campus to the U.S. this school is an important part of us. It is not perfect for sure; but if I had to do it over: I would happily go for another ride. Thanks Suffolk. Go Ram.
- Great Faculty and staff, since I decided to enroll in this program at Suffolk university, I have been treated very well from all staff. Starting from registration to professors. And this is in my opinion what makes Suffolk different than other universities. They understand that some process are difficult for some students especially for international and they don't hesitate to help. Academic Adviser has helped me a lot during my program and also the International Office. I consider my journey at Suffolk is very valuable and my great gratitude to all wonderful people there.
- Happy with individual mentorship within the Psych Dept, although, very dissatisfied with the university's ability to support a research oriented PhD Program.
- I am a somewhat satisfied graduate, on a scale. The program was very expensive, especially for MBA/Health or MHA students who have very limited tuition reimbursement through hospitals. The curriculum for the healthcare component of my MBA was very redundant. I think faculty needs to collaborate to make sure they aren't covering the same topics over and over again. The MBA courses, though expensive, I could justify the tuition to a greater extent. I also found the faculty brought more to the table with their work experience. My healthcare classes I feel were so redundant, that I was spending money to learn the same thing over and over. The curriculum needs to be more skill-specific. I feel unprepared with regards to information systems in healthcare and things like data analysis and reporting which is really important skill in healthcare today. The Sawyer Business School facilities could use updating, for the cost of tuition it would have been nice to benefit from a nicer environment. The faculty and staff really care about the students, which I found to be really nice.
- I appreciate the scale of Suffolk. Suffolk tried its best to build up networking opportunities for students. I wish some part time professor could reply emails more efficiently.

- I attended Suffolk Law School from Fall 2011-Summer 2012. For a number of personal and professional reasons, my grades suffered and I was academically dismissed. I took some time to adjust my life, and then applied to the MPA program at the Sawyer School as a CAPS student in Spring 2013. I was then formally accepted as a matriculated student thereafter. I remain very grateful for the "second chance" that the Sawyer School gave me. I went from a 1.953 GPA in law school to a 3.963 in the MPA program, and was just invited to join Pi Alpha Alpha. I believe this fact reflects what a poor fit law school was for me, and how right the MPA program was. When future Veterans apply to a program (such as the MPA) with an anomalous black mark on their record, please give them a chance, as you did for me. Veterans rarely make the same mistakes twice. I am very proud to be graduating with my MPA, and to have had the opportunity to learn from some very dedicated professors--and to redeem myself and my GPA. Thanks to student accounts as well for making the whole GI Bill process VERY stress-free. They handled 99% of the work. I used to work many years ago in the Facilities Dept. at a competitor of Suffolk's in Boston. In saying that, the facilities response at Suffolk is horrible. I emailed several people about flickering/distracting light fixtures in Suffolk classrooms many times...only for them to still be flickering/unaddressed 8-10 months later. Please outsource the facilities process to a call center that can aggregate student/faculty complaints and assign job numbers to the complaints. In class, we learn about the role that accountability plays in the public sector, yet when (paying) students speak up, they have no expectation the university will be accountable for fixing something as simple as a flickering light. This presents an unfortunate conflict with the actual lessons being taught in class. Please address this. Keep up the global travel seminars as well. Specific professor is an amazing asset! Thank you for your time.
- I believe that the school, overall, has a lot to offer to their students. Professors can offer a lot to the group as a whole, but do need to be mindful that some students work full time and have very busy schedules. Consideration should be towards keeping full time students at the earlier class sessions, since then group work would then be with students who are PT and have a lot on their plate, thus leading to better understanding of expectations and schedules when completing projects. Facilities, like the Sawyer computer lab, should have longer hours so that the PT night students can utilize the rooms right before their classes. Those professors who go out of their way to help their students (I know of a few) should be celebrated. It is rare to not only find good professors, but to find those who really want to help their students succeed.
- I believe the MHA program is still in its infancy. Its lack of CAHME accreditation put a burden on my future plans to get certified and licensed in my home country. Also, some classes that were very good were only 1.5 credits and should be full semester classes. Many classes were very repetitive as well.

- I believe there needs to be more communication between schools for those students that are pursuing a dual degree program. I thought I found the perfect fit for my future career in the MPA and Masters in counseling dual degree program. To clarify, my experience in the MPA program was both eye opening and a terrific asset to my career in the non-profit sector. However, I was significantly disappointed in the lack of transparency in the CAS counseling program. I made a substantial effort to sit down with my adviser at the beginning of the counseling program and map out how to pursue that portion of my degree as a part-time student. My adviser did not understand that I was a part-time graduate student in both programs even though I provided this information upon our first meeting. He went on to advise me to take psychological diagnosis in the Spring 2013 semester when I should have taken a prerequisite class (only offered during Spring semesters which was also not clarified in our first meeting) to allow me to pursue my counseling internship in Fall 2013. This oversight caused my timetable to be pushed back one year and inevitably made me make the decision to withdraw from the counseling program due to the extent of the post-graduate work that was also required for my licensure (also not explained to me during the two Suffolk University Graduate open houses I attended). In summary, it would be in the best interest of the university and prospective students to have representatives for both schools at the open house events and properly explain what is required to pursue each degree program and what is required after graduating the program if further schooling is required. It may also be to a future student's advantage to have each dual degree program have a liaison between schools to keep track of students who pursue dual degrees so they don't fall through the cracks as I feel that I did. Thank you.
- I came to Suffolk to work with a specific faculty member who I am very happy with. My department was supportive and helpful. The school as a whole was less helpful; the administration's decision to weaken and ultimately close my program made life difficult (especially for those students who entered after me) and was ill advised.
- I did like attending Suffolk University and believe the professors who really cared about the students and making connections with them were the best part of the program. Specific professors made this experience very worth while. They cared about connecting course content to real life applications as well as took time to get to know students and took an interest in their lives.
- I did my undergraduate degree at Suffolk, too, and I really love the university. It's been my home since 2008, but I was really disappointed with the program overall. I didn't think that the program really did the field of Higher Education justice, and I wish that it was two years (although having a year and a half does save tuition money). I think that the program needs to be restructured and that the required courses need to be changed - it should be a requirement for all students to take College Student Development Theory in order to be successful in the field. Overall, I think it is a good program, it just needs some work.
- I do like most of professors in the university. But some of them are far behind the average and it is a common sense among my classmates. We expressed our opinions in the evaluations and cannot get any responses about that.

- I don't think that a MBA degree at Suffolk will enhance my career a little bit because there is no reputation outside Boston. But I learned a lot at Suffolk, especially how to work with team mates who have different background. I appreciate people who I have met here.
- I enjoyed my Suffolk experience. As a commuter student I wish that there were more events and programs targets at us (i.e. not events in the middle of the day when it is difficult for us to arrive on campus). I truly enjoyed the networking socials and found that they were a great way to meet other students.
- I feel like the only reason I had a good experience here at Suffolk was due to my own intellectual abilities and personal drive. There are a few good professors whom show that they truly care about their students, but overall there is too much focus on quantity of courses and how many students you can cram into each classroom, rather than the qualitative experience. I attended business school prior to NESAD and it was of the same nature, but better equipped to deal with high numbers of students and the course offerings were more thoroughly detailed and thoughtfully prepared for. Professors need to keep up with technology and current "goings-on" in the world. It is not fair to students whom are paying a lot of money to attend classes, only to find out that they are better equipped to teach the class than the professor. It is important that professors attend seminars and allow time in their schedule to stay up to date on current products and design trends in the marketplace. If you are teaching a sustainable design studio, be sure that it is sustainable. Otherwise do not advertise it as such, that is false advertising. You cannot solicit students to take courses pertaining to different subjects and then once the students are present not follow through on what you said was offered in the course. It truly makes students feel like they are wasting their (or the government's!) money. You are not running a BUSINESS when you are running an educational facility. Your sole purpose is to educate students, not increase enrollment and thereby, profits. I understand that this is America, but if you want your school to be highly reputable, I would be more careful and thoughtful when accepting applicants into the program. It is insulting to hard working, intelligent and thoughtful students when they are in classes with students whose intellectual abilities (ie. ability to retain knowledge and think critically) are not at the level of advancement that a graduate program should require.
- I feel that I received a good education. I definitely learned more than I expected to. I wish the program had more networking events that encouraged the part-time grad students to attend. These part-time grad students work in the Boston area and provide a great source for networking. Due to the high amount of international students in the program, the opportunities to network among full-time students are more limited. The location of the university is ideal and unique. I had a bad experience with a tenured finance professor. Through reading reviews, and talking with students both past and present apparently I am not alone.

- I felt that the Group Projects were a very unfair aspect of this school. Professors selected team members, however, with every group project, I did all of the work. My classmates did not do anything, and I was forced to do entire projects by myself throughout the year. Even when you talk to professors about this group aspect, nothing was done, and it was simply unfair. This was with about every group I have had throughout the year, not just in one class. Also, I think the Sawyer Library is crowded, loud, and too small for the magnitude of students that attend this school. It is nearly impossible to get work done as it is so loud (even in the quiet floor). At times, it is nearly impossible to find a seat. I think the Graduate Lounge on 4th floor Sawyer needs improvement. It is very small, and recently, they have gotten rid of the tables. Now, there is no place to work, and one cannot go to that room to study.
- I got much more out of my undergraduate experience from Suffolk.
- I had a fantastic experience at Suffolk. Both the faculty and students were great. I learned a lot and immensely improved my professional skills. My big complaint is that there were not enough networking events. I did not feel the bond with fellow classmates that my other friends (who attended different MBA programs) felt. I wish there were more opportunities to create professional relationships.
- I had a wonderful experience in the School Counseling program!! It is sad to see this program go.
- I had an excellent experience in my degree program, the faculty is superb, the diversity of the student body was extraordinary and the global perspective invaluable. The University's lack of focus on career services is a real problem for students. Suffolk needs to build strong relationships with businesses and alumni. Had I known the lack of support I would receive from career services, I would have chosen another University.
- I have enjoyed being both an undergraduate and graduate student at Suffolk. Leaving this time is bittersweet considering it is my last time ever coming to campus.

- I love Suffolk and really enjoyed my time here. I'd suggest informing graduate students a little more during orientation about how things operate (cards, lockers, graduate lounges etc). I would have also really liked to have known what student clubs were available to join at the graduate level when I first arrived. These clubs provided great networking and helped me to make friends here on campus (especially because I'm not from here and am a full time student). I would not have repeated the MBA/Health concentration. The MBA section was great, and it contributed greatly to my learning. However, the Health part severely lacked in helping me to grow. As an MBA/H student I had to formally submit a request to me added to the Healthcare emails and BlackBoard group. Had I been added to this at the start, I would have known when to sign up for an internship and what classes I should be taking. Furthermore, when other students and myself asked the chair for assistance, we were told to ask specific professor as we are MBA students and ultimately not his concern (his main concern is the MHA program, as he has told us). SO, who do the MBA/H students turn to for guidance? While a few of the Health professors and adjuncts are very good and always helpful, I was disappointed with the lack of interest in my program and the lack of guidance. Lastly, as an MBA/H student I would have loved to have learned what opportunities in the work force there are for me. The MHA program pushes for Hospital careers and that is their only connection. Why don't they have connections with pharma companies, ACO's, senior care facilities etc?
- I love Suffolk University and am incredibly grateful for the education I have received while in graduate school. I am privileged to continue my education at Suffolk next year for an additional graduate degree.
- I loved my experience at Suffolk. As much as I enjoyed my CAS classes I realized I enjoyed the Business school just as much. I do wish CAS offered a better variety. Also better planning needs to be done to make sure classes are offered at least once a year. I had a few classmates who had problems getting requirement courses because they weren't offered for Fall or Spring semester.
- I really enjoyed some of my professors and their teaching methods. I loved being able to take various electives that interested me. I also loved the diversity of my classmates. Some items that would have drastically improved my experience are: the guest speakers and opportunities for professional photos, interview practices, etc were all during the day. None of these were really available for evening students. Also, my advisor was very responsive to me questions, but never proactive about providing information or offerings. Finally, the state of the Sawyer Building is terrible compared to the other buildings and classrooms. Its crazy considering the amount of tuition that is paid that the classrooms could look so run down.
- I started in the executive program and finished on my own. There was no follow up after I had to withdraw from the executive program for health reasons. If I had not been motivated to finish on my own it would have been easy to never finish. I connected with specific professors and they helped me through the remainder of my degree requirements. I truly appreciate their dedication to the students.
- I started the program with a goal of growing my core capabilities and I have grown more than my expectations. I was fortunate to start the program with specific professor in the north campus. Suffolk is fortunate to have her in their employ. I preferred the atmosphere of Merrimack College over the new north campus.

- I strongly suggest the career service be improved and enhanced to a great extent. It is the most dissatisfied thing I experienced at Suffolk.
- I think overall, Suffolk is a good school. But there are still some professors not having enough professional knowledge. I hope the future accounting program can have more courses focus even closer to CPA exam.
- I think the Integrated Marketing Communication program needs more challenging required courses. Courses such as New Media and New Markets, and Social Media were far too easy for the graduate level, and I did not learn much new material from them. I also think there need to be more courses available, especially the elective courses in the SBS, which I found the most valuable.
- I understand that the school is in downtown Boston but the price is considerably higher than other graduate programs. My work started to pay for the school and when they decided they were not going to pay for employees anymore it would have been more work for me to transfer and start over. If I had known that my work would no longer pay for the program I would have gone to a school that was half the cost.
- I was hoping to have a better experience and support from the faculty. I was put in different unprofessional situations.
- I will remember this experience for the rest of my life. It was not easy, it was challenging, but I enjoyed it so much. I like the person I am today because of this challenging experience. Thank you!
- I wish Suffolk can improve its ranking both in US and international. I love Suffolk!
- I wish there were more about crime in my program. More police agency activities would have been very useful. Felt it was more about theories and ideal situations rather than real work/world experience.
- I wish there were more freedom in the GMBA course selection. I wish the core requirements had more options or alternatives. I wish that there were more events for students in terms of networking and socializing.

- I would love to be contacted in person about this. Where should I start? There is a constant feeling the Suffolk does not care or want the NESAD community. The restricted access to the facility - nights and weekends - makes it difficult for many students to complete to work on time. This is one of the few design schools in the nation that does not provide 24/7 studio access. Cost cutting measures has decreased the quality of education. With the structure of studio classes, I would only have 20 minutes of interaction with a professor weekly, but pay to be in class working alone for six hours. Increasing class size is not the answer - technology is. Providing computer labs for all of the students should not be a requirement. Once again, this is something that Suffolk is in the minority nation wide. Why not require students to have their own computers? That will eliminate the need for three IT people and will allow students to work at any hour, not needing the 24/7 access. Lastly, an Interior Architecture program should not be run by an Interior Designer. They have very different roles in the design world and their personal agendas are being pushed onto the students. I never would have come to this school if the program was advertised for what it really is, not what it is suppose to be. There are some serious problems with the management of NESAD and Suffolk's attitude. If you want this top ranking program to remain on top and to grow, you need to look to other schools and reevaluate the leadership. There are a lot of good things about this program, but unless the issues are addressed, I will have no problem telling prospective students my honest opinion. Please feel free to contact me to speak about the potential of this school and its future.
- I would recommend the school to anyone.
- I'm satisfied with the overall education/program & was given some fantastic opportunities. However, there should be improvements made to the following: 1.The waiver system. I understand that this is an incentive to attract students, but it's out of hand & not doing them any favors in the long-term. I've had students in 800-level classes who can't accurately read a financial report, do not speak in class & do not understand basic business principles either out of lack of prior coursework or lack of professional experience. You're giving these students MBAs. It's scary. 2. The communication system. I receive Suffolk e-mails every day on subjects that don't pertain to me, yet don't receive crucial ones or receive them hours before an event (ex: financial aid information, graduation information, guest speakers). It all becomes white noise & is ineffective. 3. The career services office/networking events. You basically have one person (who anyone knows of) handling this for both undergraduates & graduates. I'm not expecting to have my hand held into employment, but for a business school in downtown Boston there should be a relationship with more than just a few companies (this relates to #1 as well).
- It has been such a great experience at Suffolk University. I am well pleased to be a part of the community. It has been such a wonderful experience to meet some of my Professors who have a great experience in the field and have impacted their knowledge in me.
- It has been such a great experience at Suffolk University. I am well pleased to be a part of the community. It has been such a wonderful experience to meet some of my Professors who have a great experience in the field and have impacted their knowledge in me.
- It was a great experience for me. I cherished that experience.
- It was a great experience. Totally different from what I had earlier in my undergraduate.

- It was fun, I did my undergraduate here as well, so I know what the experience was to be expected.
- It was great to have a choice of obtaining my degree fully online. I love Suffolk's Global Seminars as I think it is a great way to learn about cultures and businesses across the world. All instructors that I had have great personal and professional experience and were willing to share all they can with their students. As I took some online classes I wish I had a better experience with Blackboard. Many times it was not working or some files have been deleted, so there were some technical difficulties that interrupted courses and class sessions.
- It's a great school I really enjoyed being part of it. I am very glad that I got the chance to do my undergrad and grad degrees at Suffolk! Very proud to be part of this community! I just love it!
- It's been a great experience and I couldn't be happier with my decision to attend Suffolk. I landed a very satisfying full-time job in my field of study before graduating, so everything has worked out as well as I could have hoped.
- It's been really great experience, the professors were really helpful and nice.
- It's great that NESAD's graduate program accepts people who are changing careers, but they need to develop a better system for helping us learn the programs and design basics before trying to teach about conceptual design.
- It's very hard to say how satisfied I am with the degree at this time because it's not yet finished. In one year, if and when I have a better job or position and the pace of my life is more normal I will know how effective the EMBA program has been.
- Level of expertise varied greatly between professors. Some classes were great, some were a flat out waste of time and money. Some professors were very unresponsive. Course load varied greatly between classes. Some classes offered 4+ hours of homework, others far less or even no out of school work. Some classes ran late every week. Other classes let out early every week. No apparent continuity of operations. This was very disappointing. Why are midterms and finals necessary in an MBA program. Found they offered little to no gauge of success or supplement to learning. Far too many foreign students allowed to enter program without command of English language. There were many, great Foreign students, however, those that were not able to communicate effectively greatly diminished my level of learning and added to a growing number of frustrations. Part time MBA advisor was marginal at best. Offered little to no advising and often missed appointments. Most professors were pretty understanding of working students regarding their schedule.
- Much has been said about promoting diversity at Suffolk University. It's just talk but no action. Even some of the professors fail to acknowledge or provide opportunity for minority students to express and/share their opinions during class discussions. This should not be the case, especially in this time and age.
- NESAD needs more support from the University - it has such amazing potential. It is nationally recognized yet barely acknowledged by Suffolk. This is lost business potential!

- No where in the Executive MBA program did we specifically learn to write a business plan! We should have had a specific hands on time do include this in one of the classes.
- Offer more challenging courses and more varied courses. When students have a "core" course waived it's not possible to register for any other classes online - you always have to call the registrar - that's ridiculous. Get on the same calendar as the Law School so JD/MBA students aren't scheduled to be in two places at once during holiday weeks. Teach Professors to stop grading for completion and instead grade for quality of content. Busy work (summarizing articles, regurgitating theories, etc.) doesn't teach anything but it gives students something silly to waste their time on as "homework" every week. Teach business writing - throughout the entire program I did not have one Professor offer constructive criticism of my writing style or ability to synthesize facts into a memo useful for someone unfamiliar with the situation. This is the most important skill employers are looking for and not a single Professor could be bothered with it. I can't say this enough: Up the academic rigor. Currently, a Suffolk MBA is something you "earn" by showing up, sitting through classes, and paying your bill on time. It offers little to no value to students other than the ability to say they have an MBA.
- Overall good experience.
- Overall, good experience, but I was only here for one year. I think Suffolk does a better job of assisting their undergrads in finding jobs before graduation than they do with their graduate students though. Often I would find out about a job fair, etc. only via email, my professors never mentioned them or gave employment advice.
- Professors and visiting faculty are really nice and cooperative. They know where to hit and how to shake student's brain. The services provided in the university (printing and all other stationary) is really good. I also appreciate the environment where all the designers work together and learn something from all fields. I truly encourage people to take one or two electives in which you will be working with some other profession major. All over I had a very unique experience at Suffolk University.
- Professors are master's of their field and are really helpful in and outside of the classroom. I had such a great experience at Suffolk, I am really disappointed that it is ending so soon.
- Requiring an enrollment of 10 people to offer a class is absolutely ridiculous when you need to account for a PhD program that can only accept 7-11 people each year. My cohort has 7 people in it, and the limited classes offered because of this "rule of 10" is compromising my education, and contributes to my telling future graduate students to specifically NOT attend Suffolk.
- Some classes were very challenging and others were not as challenging. I wish some of my professors pushed me harder to do more projects that I could apply to the "real world", in the moment it can be frustrating when you take hard classes but it benefits you more in the end.
- Some required courses are very boring and useless.

- Something needs to change. The school fees need to reflect the quality of education and not the real estate liability for having a campus in Downtown Boston.
- Somewhat satisfied because the semester that I enrolled, my program was phased out. And the second program that I was enrolled into was also phased out. I felt as though I did not have as many options for classes as I should have and felt as though I could not select the classes I wanted.
- Specific professor is awesome!
- Specific professor leaving was a great loss to the Global MBA program. I am not sure I would have chosen it again if I was just starting out. That being said, I really hope the program improves because I want people to be as excited about it as I was when I started. Hopefully something changes.
- Suffolk gives you the opportunity to apply what you learn to real life while learning about different cultures and different career fields.
- Suffolk provided me with what I needed to graduate and feel confident about entering into my career path. A large part of the knowledge I gained, however, was self-driven. Although some classes were helpful, others seemed less structured and disorganized. The professors are knowledgeable, but the structure of the entire program needs a lot of work.
- Suffolk should be the premier business school in Boston (discounting Harvard and MIT) with an emphasis on international business. However the university does a terrible job promoting the MBA program, ironic given the high caliber of the marketing professors. Externally, by virtue of location alone, Suffolk has a huge advantage over some of the other ranked schools. But it doesn't seem like the current administration is capable of even taking simple, virtually cost-free, actions such as setting up a solid LinkedIn presence or encouraging students to take part in area events such as international conferences hosted by Harvard Business School. Internally Suffolk does a very poor job differentiating its graduate programs from that of the undergraduate, which is mind boggling given how much the graduate business program has going for it. Perhaps most frustrating is the very poor communication from the Dean's office. Even when there is a good networking event hosted by Suffolk the announcement is usually so poorly conveyed (Suffolk email) and timed (day before in some cases) that attendance is subpar. Why not use MySuffolk and LinkedIn? On the positive side I was able to meet a number of students from around the world and foster life long connections. Also the wide variety of electives were of great quality (with one or two exceptions).
- Suffolk University is such a great university. Thanks for this great opportunity; I truly obtained substantial of information in my (OLD) Program. Unfortunately, this program is soon ending... Thank You.

- Suffolk was a perfect fit for me at this point in my life. The location, flexibility, culture, and offerings were exactly the mix I needed while I worked a full time job. I was able to see a transformation in Suffolk from when I started in 2010, mostly for the good. Some of the faculty I encountered at Suffolk are A+, are inspiring, and really care about student learning. There were a few I encountered that picked the wrong profession. In one case I brought the issue to the Dean and a solution was proposed, making good out of a disappointing experience. I had the opportunity to use both the North campus as well as Boston. While they are very different in some ways, the flexibility they offered helped me greatly. Suffolk should consider how it can expand the North campus. Living on the North shore, there is opportunity here to gain a stronger recognition among potential MBA candidates.
- Thank you!
- Thanks for giving me excellent education. Great time and opportunities. Great professors.
- The brand equity is appalling and the curriculum needs an overhaul--less academic groupthink and more practical group application. Maybe Suffolk should only offer a part-time, commuter MBA program because in terms of what it brings to someone changing pathways and looking to be enveloped by a full-time experience, it is fairly disorganized, unimpressive, and unable to deliver what it should. I wasn't looking to increase my listening or reading comprehension; I wanted to gain a business/marketing skill set that I could then leverage, along with my MFA, to gain employment. I'm basically making the same argument to interviewers as I did two years ago. The Boston market is way too competitive for Suffolk. Either man up or give up because the brand is hurting.
- The degree to which the Office of the Dean and the new president literally lied to the students in the economics PhD program regarding the status of the program, the closure of the program and the commitment of resources to the program is astonishing. After clearly deciding to close the program students were still admitted to the program. About half of the faculty were let go from the department, via denial of tenure, and none were replaced. Students had to be taught by my unqualified part time faculty and there were no resources left in terms of faculty to advise dissertations. It is hard to believe that a university could do so much to abandon its graduate students. My experience at Suffolk was characterized by a complete breach of trust and implicit breach commitment by the administration.
- The experience at Suffolk was great; however, my program was eliminated which was very disappointing as it limited the types of courses I could take and forced me to double up on classes to get through the program before it was eliminated. Very unfortunate.
- The facilities in the Sawyer building were horrific. Most of my classes were in windowless classrooms with too many students squished in. Some of my electives had undergraduates in. In many instances, severe language barriers stood in the way of my learning from class interactions. Some faculty, especially for electives were subpar.
- The Global Travel Seminar and the Capstone Course (MBA 800) both with specific professor, and also MBA 780 with specific professor are the best courses I have EVER been a part of.

- The GMBA program is a great asset to Suffolk. It was the reason why I choose Suffolk to pursue my MBA. The education you receive in this program is very transferable to people in global positions. I will highly recommend the Global MBA to anyone seeking higher education looking work in the international Global marketplace. Thanks for the great adventure!
- The interior design program at NESAD is rapidly degrading. I value my education there immensely but am not certain I would want to hire a NESAD grad 5 years from now. The increasing class sizes, over-extended faculty, excessive amount of weak students admitted to the program, and lack of professionalism among faculty (thesis reviews running late, lack of external critics invited to reviews, lack of basic communication skills on the part of certain faculty members) are all extremely problematic. The lack of connection of the faculty to the Boston design community is also palpable and frustrating. Recommended: new chairperson. Hire 1-2 new FT faculty to replace those who have departed. Stricter admissions standards. rehaul of the thesis sequence. Increase thesis research and studio to 6 credits each to ease burden on international students who are required to carry 12 credits. Increase standards for professionalism among faculty. Suffolk needs to decide whether it is going to continue to starve NESAD and this formerly top-ranked program of oxygen or let it thrive. It is not on a good trajectory right now.
- The last two years of my life at Suffolk were with no doubt the best in my life (so far). Thank you for a great atmosphere, thank you for an amazing location and thank you for a wonderful community.
- The professors in the MPA program are fantastic. Two areas for improvement are in statistical analysis and the ability to calculate statistics w/o spss and outside the MPA program, the writing lab should allow graduate more time with writing instructors.
- The program is not very well organized since students are not provided with an introductory class which could prepare them for the demanding classes in Finance. Also they should consider the pressure group projects put on students (many students pass the class on their team members work). I personally understand the concept and the need for students to work in a group in order to prepare for real life work, however, sometimes I had to work 3 times harder because my team members did not do their job. When they did, I always had to take additional time to verify if they have plagiarized. (many send they work as a copy & paste of web pages...therefore I had to do their part as well and the stress level was big). I am tired, frustrated, but happy of my development and achievements.
- There are many times during the course of my study when I was in class or doing homework at home that I thought: "This is worth every penny; I really made the right choice by choosing the GMBA." I especially appreciated the breadth and the depth of knowledge of the teaching staff in the field of marketing and communications. I wish I was more drilled in some of the professional areas I was particularly weak in -- i.e. number crunching. That said, the area of statistical analysis is perhaps the one where I grew the most. Looking back on the curriculum, I found some serious overlap in terms of content between some courses. Also, I found myself wishing that I took certain courses in reverse order -- for example I wish I had taken Mktng Research for Managers, before taking Global Marketing Consulting.

- There aren't enough resources dedicated to NESAD to make the interior design program as strong as it should be. Some teachers are great while others are ineffective. Class sizes are too big for studio classes where we depend on feedback and critiques as there isn't enough time to get around to everyone. Class availability and sequencing is limited and challenging--I wish I had taken Universal Design and 3d Vis earlier in the program rather than the last two semesters since it would have helped inform a lot of my other classes. Thesis was a great project, especially with a great advisor, but it is too long (thesis design in the fall) with the presentation extending through the break and into the first week of the spring semester. It is not only exhausting, but puts us behind in our classes in the spring. Would be better to do final presentation after construction documents are completed, then be finished with thesis entirely.
- There was one section that I did not complete (plans after graduation) as there was nothing applicable for part time graduate students.
- There wasn't a lot of opportunity to build a graduate school network, outside of joining LinkedIn groups. There also wasn't a lot of guidance provided as a new graduate student - I had to do a lot of asking around and trying to figure things out on my own. I wish there was a checklist for new graduate students to find out about applying for fellowships or when to register, get books, etc. I do appreciate how the programs recognize its students. I enjoyed my time at Suffolk, especially through the co-op position gained while studying at Suffolk as it has helped me with my career path and development. I enjoyed my professors and classes.
- This was mostly redundant compared to my undergrad experience at Stonehill College.
- When I originally considered Suffolk University I was thinking about concentrating in entrepreneurship due to all the electives offered in that area. Unfortunately once I enrolled, I realized that the list of all the electives (for several concentrations) are not offered or only rarely offered. Had I know this I probably would've gone somewhere else and it contributed to the fact that I didn't get to concentrate in the area I wanted to, and the last entrepreneurship class I wanted to take in my last semester was cancelled and I ended up taking an elective I didn't care about just so I could get my credits, which isn't something I care to do at the graduate level. There are so many adjunct professors and some don't really care about students learning. There are several classes that don't follow the same format depending on who you take. I think this is a huge problem, there should be a consistent format for all professors to follow especially for core classes (and especially because there are so many adjunct professors). It's completely unfair that my learning experience in an MBA core class is totally different than someone else's because we either covered different information or the class was set up differently. I understand there will always be some differences in how things are taught but I think the program can really benefit from a standardized curriculum.
- While I had some exceptional teachers at Suffolk, they were few and far between. Adjunct faculty generally had a tenuous grasp on their subject matter, and while they may have been professionals in their field, it didn't necessarily make them good teachers, or even exceptional enough in their field to teach others.

- Wish that the university placed more importance and time towards bettering NESAD. The interior design program consistently ranks in the top 10 nationally, and it is very respected in the Boston community. There need to be more funds towards the facility as well as hiring more faculty.
