

00:00 - Hey y'all.
00:01 My name is Cameron Breither, feel free to call me Cam.
00:03 I use they, them, their pronouns
00:04 and I am the assistant director
00:06 for the Center for Student Diversity and Inclusion
00:08 here at Suffolk.
00:09 So our office is open to all students on campus,
00:11 whether you're a seasoned activist
00:13 looking to get involved with social justice work
00:15 in the Boston area,
00:16 or for somebody who's just starting now
00:18 to learn about diversity, equity, inclusion, and identity,
00:20 and you want a space to go and talk to folks about it.
00:23 One of our big focuses is holding programs and events and
00:26 not only help to create a more welcoming, inclusive Suffolk,
00:29 but that also creates space for students to meet new people
00:32 and to build community, too.
00:34 Another one of the things that our office is
00:36 a great resource for is for helping students
00:38 navigate the bias and the channel nine reporting processes.
00:41 You're a student who's experienced either one of these,
00:43 and you have questions, or just want some support,
00:45 we're always here to talk,
00:47 but honestly,
00:48 whether you're someone who's just looking to get involved
00:49 with activism,
00:51 or you're trying to figure out where to start,
00:52 or you need support, I'm always around to chat.
00:55 Feel free to drop by our office in Sawyer 828
00:57 whenever you want to.
00:58 But hot tip, we have free bagels, tea, and coffee
01:01 on Thursday mornings from nine to 11
01:03 so I definitely expect to see you then.
01:05 All right, see you around campus.
