I'm going to miss hanging out with my friends outside of the Suffolk buildings, the Boston Common walking by students on Treemont street. And of course, talking to students and professors as we all waited to get on the elevators. Being able to walk into an office and recognize people and automatically feel really welcomed was such a comforting feeling and something that always made a day a little bit better. Actually being in the city. I thought that was a kind of unique experience, just being right downtown. Being able to, you know, walk from class or my dorm and just explore downtown Boston. I thought that was very cool. Seeing all my friends around campus, meeting up with them and going to special events around campus put on by different organizations, different Suffolk offices. I am probably going to miss the journey program the most. If I didn't get involved with the journey program I wouldn't have been able to go to Disney World or even Barbados. I'm going to really miss walking through the Boston Common and seeing familiar faces. I'll tell you what I'm not going to miss, the Sawyer elevators, not one bit. But I am going to miss getting to go to school in the very middle of one of the greatest cities in the entire world. The city of Boston, I call Boston my second home now. So I'll be, fortunately I'm from Chicago and Chicago is a great city and all but Boston has a big piece of my heart now. And I plan on going back there a lot.
- I'm gonna miss being able to just walk down the street to Faneuil hall or just be able to grab a bite of food to eat somewhere.
I'm really gonna miss Suffolk's Campus and being able to be a part of it for the past four years has just been incredible being from a small town in New Hampshire.
And I will miss all the memories that Boston has brought me.

- I am definitely going to miss serving students at Suffolk, particularly serving as the president of the black student union this year.
I am truly going to miss all of the relationships that I've formed with faculty, staff.
Suffolk, I'm going to miss you.
I'm going to miss everyone.
And I am so, so truly grateful and blessed to have been part of the Suffolk family.

- I will miss Suffolk community and Suffolk University campus because it's one of the greatest campus.
- I will definitely miss the experiences
I was able to have in the classroom.
Not only learning about myself,
but also learning about others
and definitely knowing what path
I'm interested in going down.

- Just the constant support system and the community that's just around.
There's always somewhere to go to talk to someone.
There's always someone rooting for you.
And it just, there's no better feeling than knowing that there's someone there you can talk to.
And there's someone there to be like, you know
I'm not sure if I can do this.
And then, you know, there's someone there to just be like but you can, you know you can.
Just do it, you can do it.
Never thought I'd say this, but I also miss going to class, you know having the opportunity to chat with classmates who might not look at things the same way I do, so I can learn something, maybe they can learn something. And just having that, you know, that community feeling and being a part of something.

I really miss just classes. I am working full-time from home. So I miss just having just academic conversations with peers, with professors. I've really grown to miss being in a classroom. And I never thought I'd say that. Interacting with professors and my friends, you know, just having conversations with them about the subject matter, but also growing as a person, which is what so much of college is about.

Joining different groups of people going to the different clubs and meeting just different people from different backgrounds. I think I'll miss the family I made. You know whether that's the family of friends I've made in Greek life, where we quite literally are a family now. Or the family that I've made through classes and group projects or the ambassador family.

I'll miss everything. I think, you know, one of the biggest reasons that I came to Suffolk was because of the diversity. I speak Arabic at home. So having that opportunity to just walk through the halls, walk through the dining halls and the buildings and be able to hear the language that I'm so familiar with just made Suffolk feel like home even more.

- It's like a feeling you get when you're on campus.
Like when you walk to the third floor of Sawyer, student leadership and involvement. And you see students playing pool and ping pong. And the staff in the office are always, Dave brings us donuts. Tats baking cookies, there's Casey and Kelsey always open to talk, chat with us, hang out. It's just like, it really is a family. It's amazing, I'm going to miss that atmosphere. - What I'm going to miss the most about Suffolk is the students. The quality of student that attends Suffolk University is beyond what I could imagine. I've met some of the most thoughtful and critical thinkers here who I truly believe can change the world.
