Corporate accounting and finance concentration is for students seeking careers within a corporation. Here you have to have a solid background in both finance and accounting. You need to develop both these competencies for financial management positions, which include a CFO role or a controller. Students enrolled in the corporate accounting and finance concentration will learn how to interpret the world around them through numbers and be prepared for careers that influence corporations internal operations. You'll have opportunities to develop an understanding of topics such as financial analysis and forecasting, or capital structure and capital budgeting, corporate valuation. All of this will help students determine where and how to invest corporate funds.
