2022-2023
CAS Faculty Research Assistant Positions

Biology
Research Assistant Position: 10 hours Weekly
Supervisor: Prof. Annette McGehee, Biology Department
Contact: amcgehee@suffolk.edu
Description: RA needed to assist with a research project involving the genetics and behavior of C. elegans. Tasks include maintaining stocks of C. elegans worms, setting up and analyzing genetic crosses, performing and analyzing behavioral, microscopy and PCR analyses. This position requires attention to detail, and meticulous note-taking skills. Prior lab experience is preferred.

CJN-Media
Research Assistant Position: 10 hours Weekly
Supervisor: Prof. Jeremy Levine, CJN-Media Department
Contact: jlevine3@suffolk.edu
Description: RA needed to assist with the planning, production, post-production, and distribution of several films. The projects are intimate character-based films tackling issues including the criminal justice system, the unresolved legacy of white supremacy, forced separation, and the representation of mental health in horror films. Tasks include research, grant tracking, assisting grant writing, production planning, transcript coordination, and assistant editing. The RA will also track film festivals, coordinate submissions and deliverables, promote films, and help coordinate with outreach partners. If local production opportunities arise, the RA will have the opportunity to join the crew as a production assistant. Research skills, professional communication skills, understanding of Google Sheets and Excel, and a strong familiarity with Adobe Premiere are a requirement. An understanding of other Adobe Suite programs, film equipment, and the film industry is a plus. Students must be highly organized, passionate, and detail-oriented.

CJN-Media
Research Assistant Position: 10 hours Weekly
Supervisor: Prof. Jonas Kaiser, CJN-Media Department
Contact: jkaiser@suffolk.edu
Description: RA needed to assist with multiple research projects in political, science, and online communication. Tasks include literature research, manually coding articles, verifying data, and validating results. RAs will get to know the empirical computation research process. Knowledge of empirical research methods like content analysis as well as of the APA style is preferred. Applicants must be meticulous and good at time management.
History, Language, and Global Culture

Research Assistant Position: 10 hours Weekly

Supervisor: Prof. Iani del Rosario Moreno, HLGC Department

Contact: imoreno@suffolk.edu

Description: RA needed to assist with a number of projects, including translation of contemporary Mexican dramatical texts. Tasks include researching Latin American and Mexican theatre, translating plays from Spanish to English, and maintenance of the project website. Research skills (library, cross-disciplinary, and online) and editorial skills are required. Candidate must be able to read and write Spanish and English well at a native or near native speaker level. Must know how to use MLA and Chicago style bibliography, Microsoft Word Office, and google platform well. Having had some experience translating texts from Spanish to English or knowing dramatic terminology is a plus. The student should be thoroughly dedicated, committed and available to work 10 hours a week. Other work obligations such as work-study or an internship may make this position too time consuming.