Lead the CHANGE

You Have the Power to Change Everything

When you go to Suffolk University in downtown Boston, you can major in what you're passionate about so you can effect major change when you graduate. You'll study with professors who will broaden your perspectives and network—and take the time to get to know you for the unique individual you are. You'll boost your resume with internships and other hands-on learning experiences in class, around Boston, and across the globe. You'll find your voice, your scene, and your people on our uplifting campus. And you'll connect the dots between classroom concepts and a career that makes a difference.

All while building a life that's entirely your own in one of the world's most opportunity-rich cities.

What you learn here will change your life, so you can change the world.

Welcome to Suffolk—where you'll discover your sense of purpose and become the leader you're meant to be.

“There’s something really authentic about our professors here. They care about all of their students’ success. And as students, we push each other to be better. We’re a smaller school, and that allows you to meet so many different people. That’s one of the reasons why I love it here: there is so much community and so much positivity and support.”

Lead Your Best Life in Boston

Turn a corner and run into an art show or performer or market that wasn't there yesterday. Find your favorite bench in the Boston Public Garden and write your papers there. And when you're in class, gaze out the window at the gleaming skyline and think, 'I'm going to work there one day.'

That's the thing about Suffolk. We're more than a campus. We're the city that surrounds us.

Get ready to play. Boston's a wonderland of restaurants, stores, museums, sports and entertainment venues, and outdoor spaces that redefine the art of hanging out.

Get ready to work. The city is home to the top names in business, tech, media, the arts, and healthcare—companies that love hiring Suffolk students as interns and employees.

Suffolk is city living every day, and it never gets old.

“The beauty of the city is that it's very walkable. My first few weeks here, I was finding a lot of places to eat with my friends, going on Bluebike rides. I'd been to Boston like any New England kid has. Exploring it on your own as an adult, it takes on a different meaning. Realizing that you go to school and live in Boston gives you a sense of responsibility and maturity. You're a resident, a neighbor.”

The College of Arts & Sciences

Maybe you'll cast your classmates in the play you wrote and direct it on stage. Or you'll spend extra time in the lab, fine-tuning complex experiments. Perhaps you'll run a winning campaign for a candidate or deliver your on-air news report without missing a beat. At Suffolk, you can do what inspires you—and build a career out of it.

There's an art and a science to choosing your major. You'll know when you've chosen just the right one. And you won't just study it; you'll experience it through hands-on classroom learning and dynamic off-campus opportunities like site visits and internships.

“I chose Suffolk because of the radiation therapy department. The professors genuinely care for you and take the time to actually get to know you. You can even get internships through them because they have friends who have friends who are looking for an intern. Next thing you know, you're working at Massachusetts General Hospital. My internship at MGH is a truly rewarding experience.”

The Sawyer Business School

Be the CEO of your undergrad education. In our downtown Boston location, you'll make business your business, learn to present like a leader, and partner with local execs through in-class and on-site collaborations.

Feel what it's like to share your market research and watch your audience get it. Master translating data into powerful business narratives. Balance that spreadsheet down to the pennies. And pursue an education you can bank on.

“It's surreal to work with a client at such a young age, but it really pushes you and gives you that insight into how a business works. A lot of people look at accounting as just numbers. Being an accountant is actually about team bonding, social interaction, making relationships, and understanding how businesses run nowadays. That intrigued me to keep learning about how my future will turn out. And every day I learn a new thing.”

This Change of Address Leads to Success

When you leave your res hall or apartment, you'll step straight into all the excitement of Boston. And that's when you'll know you're not just in the city. You're part of it.

You'll feel that way every day in Suffolk's University-sponsored housing. Our residence halls have prime downtown addresses, so you'll never be far from class, internships, and anywhere else in the city you want to explore. They've also got cafes, study lounges with unbelievable views, and floor upon floor of friendly Rams.

When it's time to sign the lease on your first apartment, you'll have your choice of diverse neighborhoods close to campus—and the confidence to live like a Bostonian.

And if you're commuting from home, special resources like our Commuter Lounge will help you feel connected and supported on campus.

“For me, coming to Suffolk meant becoming more of an adult and getting those real-world feels. I just love the atmosphere, love the environment, love the sense of being on my own—not having to be so dependent on my parents. I got an opportunity to be on the track team and met my two roommates through the team. So right away Suffolk was just giving, giving, giving.”

Lead the Way to a More Inclusive World

Everyone knows the feeling: You’re new on campus. You’ve got butterflies just thinking about your first assignments. And you have no idea where or how to meet awesome people. Now take a breath, because that last one’s easy.

Get involved. You’ll hear that a lot on our welcoming campus. That’s because it’s true! There are dozens of student clubs and organizations just waiting for you to join. Step into the spotlight, find your voice behind the podium or in print, go Greek, or dive deeper into your academic major.

There’s a place for you here. Whatever you do on campus, you’ll find new friends and develop your leadership skills in bold ways.

Suffolk Rams come from all walks of life. They’re friendly, smart, and eager to hear your story. So, say hi to your classmates and see where it goes from there. Chances are, you’ve just made a lifelong friend and discovered a new student organization to check out between classes.

"I’ve been involved with the Center for Student Diversity & Inclusion from the jump. I heard from student Diversity Peer Educators (DPEs) and they were very open. They felt welcomed and accepted, but also made sure that students with unique experiences felt supported. I finished my DPE training. Now I’m—full circle moment!—sharing my experiences with others."

Lead on the Playing Field (or Track or Ice or Court)

The roar of the crowd. The sound of the buzzer. Watching your team give everything they’ve got—and more—and being there for every moment of it.

Sports are a big deal in Boston and at Suffolk. You can compete as a Ram, cheer your heart out for your friends in head-to-toe blue and gold, or join our intramurals. Scoring discounted tickets to catch Boston’s pro teams in action is pretty cool, too.
